AI IN PRACTICE

I want an AI shopping agent. Don't you?

Here's my job ad. (And Claude's honest application.)

12 skills
I'd pay for.

swipe →

HÅKAN NILSSON

THE JOB

Wanted: a personal shopping agent. Must work for me, not the store. I'm willing to pay.

Twelve skills in three groups:

Know me

preferences, needs, delivery, loyalty, sizes

Do the job

buying, deliveries, research

Be on my side

loyalty, payment, negotiation, returns

Answers: Claude, October 2026

✓ yes today ½ partly ✕ not yet

Part 1: Know me

½

1 Knows my preferences: brands, stores, how I like to shop.

I remember what you tell me. I don't see what you actually buy.

½

2 Understands my needs, short and long term, and watches for offers that fit.

I can check on a schedule if you ask. I don't see when you're running low.

✓

3 Knows my preferred delivery options and pick-up point.

Tell me once and I'll remember.

✗

4 Takes my loyalty programmes into account.

I can't log in to your accounts.

✓

5 Knows my sizes (shoes, jeans etc).

Same as above. Tell me once.

Part 2: Do the job

✗ 6 Just buys the routine stuff ("buy toothpaste", "more black socks"). Asks first for a new sweater.

I can fill a cart, but I stop before paying. Today I ask before every purchase, and I never type in your card details.

✗ 7 Orchestrates deliveries so they arrive on the same day, not spread over the week.

That needs the retailers' delivery data, which I don't have.

✓ 8 Does market research: "I want a new robot vacuum. Which one?"

Yes. This is my best part.

Part 3: Be on my side

✓ 9 It's my agent. Not the retailer's, not the marketplace's. Show me the money.

I don't show you ads and I don't take a commission.

✗ 10 Pays with a tokenised version of my card. Limits start low and grow (under SEK 500, just buy it).

Not yet. The payment rails for agents are being built, but I'm not on them.

½ 11 Street smart: negotiates with the store and uses my loyalty status when it pays off.

I can write the pitch. You have to send it.

½ 12 Handles returns. When something is broken: "We can keep it, but we want 50 % off."

I can check the return policy and draft the complaint. You hit send.

THE SCORECARD · CLAUDE, OCTOBER 2026

Today: 4 yes. 4 partly. 4 not yet.

Preferences	½
Needs and offers	½
Delivery options	✓
Loyalty programmes	✗
Sizes	✓
Buys routine stuff	✗
Same-day deliveries	✗
Market research	✓
Works for me	✓
Tokenised payment	✗
Negotiates	½
Returns and complaints	½

no surprise there

SO WHAT?

I'd pay for this. If many do, it can change retail more than e-commerce did.

The consequences may be too big to foresee. A few I can see:

No more "You might also like"

Upsell, cross-sell and impulse selling get much harder.

A more transparent market

The agent finds and compares for me.

Marketing changes

Transactional marketing is in for a bumpy ride.

New winners and losers

Producers who give the agents what they need are in the game. If you're "just a marketplace", this might be a challenge.

and an agent that starts showing me ads
can look for another job

OVER TO YOU

Would you pay for an agent like this? Or am I alone?

Håkan Nilsson
Product strategy, digital transformation & AI